POPE TO PRESS CAMPAIGN FOR PEACE IN RUHR

Newest Plea Meets French Rebuff.

BERLIN, July 8.—(Tribune Radio.)

—Papal mediation in the Ruhr is being pressed and will continue even should the French or German political leaders not receive the efforts with open hands.

The Vatican receives a definite written memorandum from Germany it is expected, according to best informed Catholic leaders here, the pope will proceed with a wide program directed at France and Belgium.

So far as the question of sabotage is concerned, it is declared here that the pope nuncio, Mgr. Pacelli, has received a complete and satisfactory reply from the German government, with the chiefs of which he has conferred continually for four days. There were two points on which the pope requested a written reply—sabotage and reparations. The second is still unanswered.

Pope Sees Hope of Peace.

According to clerical leaders, it is apparent that the Vatican believes peace is now possible, that both sides have arrived at a position where a sincere effort to make a compromise will meet with welcome despite the first confusion against interference, and it will continue with its plans provided it is able to receive definite terms from Germany.

The German cabinet and the Prussian minister held a confidential sitting this morning, at which, it is learned, the fulfillment of the chancellor's promise regarding sabotage in the Ruhr, as well as the fulfillment of his pledges to Mgr. Pacelli, was discussed.

It was decided to take no steps against acts of violence in the Ruhr, instead of merely uttering words of disapproval. All law enforcement authorities will be ordered to break up the so-called dynamiting columns.

SPURN POPE'S PLEA.

BY HENRY WALKER.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

(Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, July 8.—The fact that the pope sent a note to the French and Belgian governments on July 4 asking them not to take any reprisals for the Ruhr, in which ten Belgian soldiers were killed, that would render Germany was confirmed by Mgr. O'Leary today.

Former Poincare informed Mgr. Verly, who acted in the absence of Mgr. Cerretti, that the two governments had decided to take "indispensable measures to prevent other German attacks."

If the pope continues to intervene in behalf of Germany, France may be forced to break off diplomatic relations with the Vatican and recall Ambassador Jonhart, it was stated tonight.

Shifts Blame to Britain.

"It will be England's fault if there is a break with France," declared a Quai d'Orsay official today.

"We do not regard the situation as permanently settled. The relations strained to the snapping point as certain British circles do," the official continued. "Really, the trouble lies in Downing street."

Premier Poincare already has clearly exposed France's position—Germany must repay the cost of reconstructing the war devastated regions, which the French government already has advanced, amounting to about 100,000,000 francs—about 20,000,000,000 gold francs ($4,000,000,000). Also Germany must pay at least the amount France is required to pay to her creditors—Great Britain and the United States.

Puts Tangle Up to Baldwin.

Great Britain already has indicated that Germany must pay her annual installments on the American loan. She is silent on how much she intends to demand from the allies.

"If Prime Minister Baldwin frankly outlines the British claims on the allied creditors it will clarify the situation and permit accurate figures on the absolute reductions the allies can make on reparations."

German Condemns Sabotage.

COBLENZ, July 8.—The German government general of the Rhine province today posted a proclamation strongly condemning sabotage.

Reins Vest Strike Fund.

DUSSELDORF, July 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—The German railroad men's strike fund, amounting to 17,000,000 marks, has been asked by the French at Maximilian, near Ludwigshafen.

ALL TRACE OF 2 AIRMEN AND BASKET LOST

Planes, Motor Boats Hunt in Vain.

Port Stanley, Ont., July 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Motor boats that joined airplanes from Seaford, field, Mount Clemens, Mich., the revenue cutter Morrill and the flying boat Buckeye from Detroit, and the hydroplane Nina from Cleveland, in the search for the basket of the balloon U. S. Navy A-688, returned to port here today empty handed.

The motor boats made only a brief search when it became apparent the airplanes, the cutter and the flying boat were making a comprehensive survey of the lake in an effort to determine the fate of Lieut. Louis J. Roth and Telford B. Noll, who occupied the balloon when it left Indianapolis last Wednesday in the national elimination race.

The Nina returned to Cleveland after scanning both the Canadian and American shores for hours today.

Planes Continue Search.

The airplanes from Seaford field still were in the air, searching about the lake late this afternoon, while the revenue cutter Morrill was understood to be patrolling along the shores.

The Buckeye from Detroit also continued the search late today, according to word received here.

The slender hope that the missing airman may have been picked up by a passing vessel, abandoned with wisdom, virtually was abandoned tonight, as more than thirty-five hours have elapsed since the recovered basket first was sighted on this port by the steamer Columbia from Cleveland.

The big bag of the A-688 was the under lock and key in a shed at the waterfront here, in charge of E. E. Jackson, keeper of Port Stanley. Mr. Jackson took it in charge, together with other equipment of the missing balloonists at the request of the United States navy department at Washington.

Basket Cut from Bag.

The bag, the basket of which appeared to have been either cut away or torn loose, was brought into port here last night by the tug Frank M. Stanley, which picked it up twenty-five miles off this shore.

Also in charge of Mr. Jackson is the clothing of the two navy airmen, a small clock and Lieut. Roth's watch, all of which were found in the rigging of the bag.

Further inspection of the bag disclosed a number of jagged rents near its upper surface. Whether these were made when it was dragged across the stern of the Stanley or resulted from the action of the waves as it was buffeted about could not be determined.

Frailties Trip of Flying Boat.

Cleveland, O., July 8.—The flying boat Nina of the Aero-Marine Airways company, left here this afternoon after a six hour search of the Canadian and American shores of Lake Erie in a fruitless effort to find some trace of Lieut. L. J. Roth and T. B. Noll. The basket of the balloon was not found. The Nina will continue the search tomorrow.

The Nina left here at 7:52 o'clock this morning in charge of P. E. Easter, Cleveland manager of the company, and Pilot C. B. Skiller and Charles Richards. The flying boat returned at 1:15 p. m. The trip was made at the request of Admiral W. A. Moffett of the navy air service.

The Nina took a northwest course, sighting the Canadian shore about ten miles west of Point Abino, an hour after starting. Skirting the shore in a zigzag course, about ten miles off shore, Manager Easter scanned the shore and lake in vain through powerful glasses to Port Stanley, Ont., approximately fifty miles.

May Renew Search Today.

Detroit, Mich., July 8.—The Aero-Marine Airways company's flying boat Buckeye, carrying newspaper men, returned here late today after a fruitless 296 mile search over Lake Erie for Lieut. L. J. Roth and T. B. Noll.

The flying boat covered virtually all that part of the lake where it was believed the missing airmen and the balloon basket might be.

Although no trace of the balloonists or the basket was seen, Charles F. Redden, president of the company, expressed willingness to continue the search tomorrow, provided the navy air service requests it.

Mr. Redden said, however, that it probably would not do much good to search haphazardly, as the basket, may drift into that part of the lake searched today, while they seek the missing men in another direction.

AN HEIR AT LARGE

(Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune.)

PART II.—CHAPTER XXXVII.

Except for a sudden dropping of her shoulders, Muriel Lannard betrayed no sign of the deep emotion stirred by Rasher's reference to Mary Brook. A selfish hope that had been growing in her heart was crushed. That slight reference, so simply expressed, was the first in which Mary's name was mentioned, but it Muriel had a world of significance. "They affair was still on. His interest in Beatrice Thornbrier was merely a friendly one."

True to type, Muriel quickly recovered her self-control. She summoned a gay smile which masked the hurt in her heart.

"And here I've been thinking your affections were switched to the attractive Miss Thornbrier, of course."

"You didn't give me credit for much constancy," answered Rasher.

"Have I had any reason to?" she retorted, and indignantly regretted the words. He flushed at the pointed allusion to his former devotion to Muriel. Here they were, back upon dangerous ground again.

"Forgive me, Harry. I shouldn't have said that, but—" she shrugged her shoulders and smiled whimsically. "Just couldn't help it. I guess it's because I've always really liked you more than—and besides, I'm a miserably spoiled thing, anyway."

She laughed nervously, and then, to his utter amazement, burst into tears. "You're lucky that my weakness and folly did not touch your life any further," she sobbed.

Deeply moved, he seized her hand. "Oh, please don't," he cried, with manlike helplessness in the presence of a woman's tears. She thrust his hand away.

"Oh, how I despise myself!" she sprang up, dabbing a tiny handkerchief to her eyes. "Please go now, Harry. I never want to see you again—never, never!"

"But, Muriel!" He was at her side now, intense concern in his eyes. "What have I said, Muriel?" he whispered awkwardly. "You know I wouldn't hurt you."

"Oh, is that you, Harry?" Her voice was hoarse. "It's all myself—and my own selfish, selfish, rotten disposition. I hate myself for making a scene. I'm utterly ashamed of myself. I really am, Harry."

Through his mind was running one continuously agonizing thought. With other men she was always in full control of herself. With him, where her interests and emotions were touched, she had a diabolist genius for saying and doing the wrong thing. She could bite her tongue out for the words she had said.

tonight. When she should have adopted a gayly bantering tone she had wept. It was so incredibly stupid!

"We'll be good friends, Harry," she said at last, "and please forgive me, too."

"Why, Muriel, there's nothing to forgive—nothing that you have done. You must know how I feel toward you—always have and always shall."

She placed her hands on his arm and looked shyly up into his eyes.

"But you never really loved me, did you, Harry?" He was thus maneuvered into a defensive position.

"You know I did, Muriel. I thought of nothing in the world but you. You were my first waking thought in the morning and my last before I went to sleep at night. One doesn't forget that very easily, Muriel."

"You're a dear," she said softly. "And I wish I didn't like you so much. It's most disturbing to my peace of mind."

"I'm glad you like me, Muriel." He laughed nervously, for he felt himself falling under the spell of her charm again.

"I wonder," she murmured. Her hands were still resting upon his arm. He was vividly conscious of her upturned eyes, so wistful and the tense electric currents agitated by her nearness. He felt suffocated, and glanced wildly, as a drowning man looks for a floating support, there was nothing in sight.

"I'll always remember me, Harry?" she whispered, so low he could barely hear her. She put her arms on his shoulders and drew him toward her.

"Will you kiss me good-bye?" she asked.

He crushed her to him and for a happy eternity felt her pliant, unresisting body in his arms.

"Now you must go," she said tenderly, "and we must never see one another again. Mother and I will leave early tomorrow. And good-bye and good luck to you and Mary."

She turned and fled from the room; her face buried in her hands. For a time he stood rooted and trembling, and then, as in a trance, he opened the door, and with a last glance at the little dinner table with its last-minute setting, he closed the door behind him.

For hours he walked, far out in the country, seeking to calm the tumult of thoughts. Her kiss was unforgettable; he could still feel the throbbing of her heart.

And he remembered that she had said good-bye and had sent him away. Strangely, it hurt now. No matter how little he cared, it hurt to be sent away. Perhaps she had meant that it should.

At his room was a telegram.

Turk-Allied Peace Treaty Is Completed

BY VINCENT SHEEN.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

(Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune.)

LAUSANNE, July 8.—The near east peace treaty was completed at 1:30 o'clock this morning. The treaty will mark the final act of the world war, which began Aug. 2, 1914, and means peace in the near east for the first time in twelve years.

The treaty is considered a victory for Turkey and again establishes the Moslem power in Europe.

The evacuation of the Dardanelles by British and French troops will take place six weeks after the ratification of the Lausanne treaty by the Angora assembly.

Turks Recognize Pre-War Concessions.

A final accord was reached on the question of concessions towards 1 o'clock this morning. The Turks agreed to recognize the legality of pre-war concessions in a special annex to the treaty called the concessions protocol.

The English agreed to restore the famous German cruiser Goeben to Turkey with stores of Turkish ammunition seized during the war.

Invite Russia to Sign.

The British delegation informed T. T. Tansu, Turkish minister, that Russia will be immediately invited to sign the clauses on the straits. It is believed that M. Tchitcherine, Russian foreign minister, intended to come to Lausanne to sign the treaty.

The American treaty with Turkey is understood to be textually complete and will be signed immediately after the allied treaty.

15 SOLID SHOTS BUT RUM RUNNER KEEPS ON GOING

Smuggler Too Speedy for Uncle Sam's Cutter.

Highland, N. J., July 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Fifteen solid shots were fired from a coast guard cutter at a speedy rum runner tonight after its crew had been aboard a French ship on run, now enjoying a Sunday afternoon social chat with the skipper.

The runner escaped, as did another that had taken on a cargo of liquor for the shore.

No chase was the cutter to the rum boat at one time that the former's crew could hear the curses of the bootlegging captain as he defied their shells and ordered full speed ahead. The runner disappeared after reaching the shore long Highland.

The captain of the rum smuggling craft paid no heed to a shot fired across his bow and managed to out-distance the government cutter, although shells dropped near enough to his boat to send spray over its deck. The first runner eluded the cutter before any shots had been fired.

Sees Benefit in Dry Law.

Washington, D. C., July 8.—(Special.)—Supporting a statement by Chief Justice William Howard Taft relative to prohibition enforcement, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, today commented on the benefits which he said have resulted from the enactment of the dry law. Chief Justice Taft has urged that citizens cease protesting against its enactment.

"The enlargement of the criminal classes by prohibition led to the trials by the law, apologetic and non-sensical attitude of respectable people to which Chief Justice Taft refers," said Mr. Wheeler, "is the most serious problem we face today."

His Reason for Crime.

"Once having learned that there are among the most prominent persons in the community a group who smile at lawbreaking when crime serves their appetite, the less cultured and less wealthy cannot see why they should keep the law safeguarding property when crime might profit them. Prohibition has not created this situation. It has merely revealed a lack of loyalty to law which already existed."

"In addition to the benefits cited by Chief Justice Taft one might add the lowered mortality rate equivalent to the saving of 500,000 lives in the first three years."

TEXAS RANCHMAN SLAYS INDICTED WELL POISONERS

Fort Worth, Tex., July 8.—After being indicted by the Tarrant county grand jury three weeks ago for the alleged poisoning of a well on the ranch of Tom Burnett, near Paradise, Paul and Arthur Steele, 43 and 50, respectively, were shot and killed on the streets of Paradise at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Tom Burnett was arrested at his ranch home a short time later by Sheriff Workman and charged with the crime. He was released on bond of $10,000.

Brothers Under Indictment.

The Burnett well, which was recently drilled on his ranch, was poisoned about a month ago, and after considerable investigation the grand jury brought indictments against the Steele brothers, both of whom live on ranches two and one-half miles from Paradise.

Saturday afternoon was the first meeting between the Steele brothers and Burnett. The latter was standing in front of a general store when Arthur Steele, accompanied by his brother, drove up and alighted from their machine.

Slayer Wastes No Time.

Burnett spotted them immediately, and, according to witnesses, pulled out an automatic and started shooting. Paul was shot as he was entering the store, and died instantly. Burnett pursued Arthur to the rear of the store and shot him as he was entering the rear door. He also died instantly.

There were eight shots fired.

The streets of Paradise were filled with Saturday afternoon shoppers when the affair started, and several women and children narrowly escaped the flying bullets.

Gannon, who managed to free himself after the robbers left, called the police, and police believe they feared to move the truck and thereby lost the contents of the safe, said to amount to more than $5,000.

BUCKET SHOPS CROOKED IF THE SHOW A PROFIT

Can't Make Money if Legitimately.

BY DONALD EWING.

Bucket shops and one night brokers can't operate on the legitimate money. If they transacted business honestly and ethically, customer obtained and every collected from the customer, only send the bucketshop that money in the hole. They are in a position who offered to sell at $10 less than it cost to make it and when asked how he could answer: "O, by selling me the bucketshop simply means letting the transaction costs him a million of twice as much as he collected the customer—figuring on a honest. For every dollar com he would have to send out two he not crooked. The proof crookedness is found in the official mate that bucketshops clean up $100 annually in Chicago.

Must Stay Crooked.

Traveling into the inner world stock markets furnishes simple solutions for the inability of the bucket to make a living and still play. Every big market has its own board of trade, made up of men whose legitimacy is testified to by approval from hard headed investment committees and especially trustees constantly watching a man who tries to beat the game. Ticker service—not quotation every sale made—is supplied and controlled by the exchange and it is only to members. Only members trade in these markets. Commissions are standardized, only stocks being quoted and stocks listed only after scrutiny.

All of this protects the customer the legitimate house to a percentage less than 10%. But this protects the shuffle and the deal of the bucket.

Give No Protection.

The bucketshop can give no protection in dealing the cards. He is member of any exchange—general has been barred for crooked work. Ticker service is barred to him. He must depend on tapping a wire for a delayed service with free inaccurate prices. He cannot sell on the recognized market. When he sells you stock, to with the law, he must buy it some one and the only way he can it is through a house that is a member of an exchange. That way he can do this to a standard commission. If his commission from you is $10 for the must pay $10 to buy the stock plus his overhead—office rent, men's salaries and commissions, local help, telephone and tele bills, printing and mailing etc. light and hundreds of incidental office has.

Four Shady Resources.

There are four answers to this situation—though the bucketshop could propound many more:

1. He must have an arrangement with an exchange member.

BUCKET SHOPS CROOKED IF THEY SHOW A PROFIT

Can't Make Money if Run
Legitimately.

BY DONALD EWING.

Bucket shops and one night stand brokers can't operate on the level and make money. If they transacted their business honestly and ethically, every customer obtained and every dollar received from the customers would go to the bucketeer that much money in the hole. They are like the crook who offered to sell suits at less than it cost to make them. When asked how he could do it, he answered: "O, by selling so many." Paying the stock market with the bucketeer simply means letting him play both hands as well as his own—play them both only by being crooked.

Every time a bucketeer sells stock, the transaction costs him a minimum of twice as much as he collects from the customer—figuring on a basis of honesty. For every dollar coming in, he would have to send out two—were he not crooked. The proof of his crookedness is found in the official estimate that bucketeers clean up $50,000,000 annually in Chicago.

Must Play Crooked.

Peering into the inner workings of such markets furnishes simple explanations for the inability of the bucketeer to make a living and still play fair.

Every big market has its exchange, or board of trade, made up of members whose legitimacy is testified to by approval from hard headed investigating committees and especially trained detectives constantly watching for the man who tries to beat the fun.

Under service—spot quotations on every sale made—is supplied and controlled by the exchange and it is given only to members. Only members can trade in these markets. Commission rules are standardized, only listed stocks being quoted and stocks being listed only after scrutiny.

All of this protects the customer of the legitimate house to a percentage little less than 100. But this protection covers the shuffle and the deal only.

Gives No Protection.

The bucketeer can give no protection in dealing the cards. He is not a member of any exchange—generally he has been barred for crooked work. Spot dealer service is barred to him and he must depend on tapping a wire or taking a delayed service with frequently inaccurate prices. He cannot buy or sell on the recognized market.

When he sells you stock, to comply with the law, he must buy it from some one and the only way he can buy it is through a house that is a legitimate member of an exchange. The only way he can do this is to pay the standard commission. If his commission from you is 10 for the sale, he must pay 10 to buy the securities, plus his overhead—office rent, salaries, help, telephone and telegraph bills, printing and mailing circulars, light and hundreds of incidentals every office has.

Four Shady Recourses.

There are four answers to this situation—though the bucketeer probably could propound many more:

1. He must have an arrangement with an exchange member house whereby he gets a reduced commission. If he claims this, it is admitting that he is a shady character, for first class brokers will not split commissions with nonmember houses.

2. He must be selling a bunk stock which he controls and is promoting and consequently does not have to buy through another house.

3. He must charge you many times the standard commission—many times what you would have to pay if dealing with a legitimate concern.

4. He is not buying the stock at all, but is pocketing your money, switching you from stock to stock so that he never has to deliver the securities, or else "flying by night" if the customers are too impatient.

It Can't Be Done.

Fifty transactions of Chicago's biggest bucket shop recently were traced through their ramifications. Each was a first purchase by the bucketeer and consequently was good stock—from which he would be switched later to bunk. This firm—one that employs a big legal staff to keep it within the law in its unethical work—actually had made the purchases, as the tracing revealed. But in each case the firm had to pay the same commission in making the purchase that it charged selling to the "mooch."

Where was the profit? Where did the firm get even expense money in such deals? Only by hooking the customer later. And this firm has an overhead expense every month of approximately $15,000.

Every month it pays $10,000 for rent in the "gold canyon" district. Its telephone bills average $1,000 a month, so many calls are made in hooking suckers. Eight salesmen average $1,400 a month in commissions and salary. Seven more average $500 each. Telegrams to avoid the federal statutes against using the mails—cost $5,000 more. Other salaries—officials and clerks—add $5,000, printing is $1,000, and a private wire to its New York office is another $1,000. Then add the hundreds of incidentals and try and figure how such a shop can make money honestly.

It can't be done.

MEET ON AUG. 18

Plans were completed yesterday for the outdoor model airplane meet scheduled to open at Grant Park on the afternoon of Saturday, Aug. 18, according to announcement of V. K. Brown, in charge of playgrounds for the South Parks board. On Sunday morning, Aug. 19, scale models will stage indoor fights at the Municipal pier auditorium.

Entries in the competition are to be sent to Terence Vincent, 480 South Michigan avenue, a member of the aviation board. All types of miniature airplanes that have a power unit (rubber bands) of eighteen inches or less are eligible in the South Parks competition. Three official flights are allowed each contestant and boys and girls of any age are admissible as contestants. First place will be accorded the owner and builder of the plane which remains in the air the longest. Rules of the competition have been compiled through the National Aeronautic association and from Harry D. Wells, designer of the South Park model airplane.

WARM WAVE ON WAY TO CHICAGO, MAXWELL SAYS

Coming with Storm Already Sighted in Sky.

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

The weather we are now having is average for July. It is neither hotter than the month, nor cooler. When the records of all July for more than fifty years are averaged, it is found that the running temperature for this time of the month should be between 73 and 74 degrees.

The appearance of the sky and the behavior of the weather instruments indicate that warmer weather will soon be back. Last week started out cool, with the daily mean temperature ten degrees below normal. The days grew hotter as the week advanced, up to Saturday, when a wave of high barometric pressure came and put an end to the heat for a time.

Warmer Weather Coming. If the general temperature had been standing still, yesterday would have had a mean on the thermometer about six degrees below normal, for this is the amount of the downward swing of a summer high air pressure. Instead, yesterday was normal. This means that as the next storm approaches the temperature will be warmer than usual. The storm has already been sighted. It is coming down in a leisurely fashion from the northwest.

Weather instruments are handy to have to tell what the weather will be for several days in advance, but they are not strictly necessary. There is a big barometer and where everyone can look at it. It is in the sky.

By watching the sky, a person can see storms approaching, even when they are more than a thousand miles away.

How Storms Are Sighted. A storm is a wave of low pressure in the air. It is somewhat conical in shape. Winds along the ground blow into it with a spiral motion opposite in twist to the hands on a clock.

These spiral winds are the water carriers. If they are wet, a heavy rain is going to fall, but if they are dry the rain will be light.

The spiral winds come out at the top of the storm. There they are caught in the strong hundred mile per hour gales which blow in the storm tracks, and are whipped into low streamers, flying in the direction that the storm will follow.

This diagram shows how to forecast the weather by the clouds. The order in which the signs appear is indicated by numbers. If two storms are approaching at the same time from different quarters, each will have its own set of clouds.

The first indication of a coming storm is the appearance of feathery clouds, high in the air. These are soon followed by long streamers, spreading fanlike from the top of the storm. Yesterday the streamers were from the northwest, indicating that the next storm to pass Chicago would appear from that quarter.

Following the streamers come lumpy black clouds, high at first, but settling lower as the wave advances. Now, if one looks carefully, the spiral nature of the winds can be seen, the lower clouds blowing at right angles to the upper ones, as the air rushes into the approaching rainy zone.

ARBITERS START WORK TODAY ON TRACTION WAGES

Arbitration proceedings which, if both sides observe pledges to abide by the decision, will dispose of the street car and elevated railway wage dispute that last month developed a strike crisis, will get under way in the council chamber at the city hall this morning.

These sessions, which were agreed upon at the "peace conference" through which Mayor Dever averted a walkout, probably will extend throughout the remainder of this month. They will be held daily, except Saturday and Sunday, and will be open to the public. The hours will be from 10:30 to 1 o'clock and from 2 to 4:30 o'clock.

List of Arbiters.

The arbitrators are: For the public—Francis X. Busch, corporation counsel, named by the mayor as the "third man" and approved by both sides.

For the unions—Mackey Hynes, former state's attorney, who served on the arbitration board that settled the 1915 traction strike.

For the surface lines—Attorney James M. Egan, also an arbiter in 1915.

For the "L" roads—Attorney William A. Morrow.

The surface lines' case will be considered first and is expected to require about two weeks. Much of the testimony to be introduced to show the street car employees are receiving "all the property will stand" under the present revenue will, it is said, be applied also in the "L" case.

Complaints for the companies will cite the wages now paid traction employees as the highest in the country. Indications are both factions will submit volumes of statistics, those of the unions emphasizing the upward trend of living costs.

The employees, now receiving 70 cents an hour, were demanding a boost of 10 cents an hour, which would be a return to the scale in effect prior to last year's strike.

The forthcoming arbitration award is to date back to June 1 and is to stand as a contract for two years. Whatever this may be, there seems reason to believe that, in view of Mayor Dever's stand, it will not be based on the possibility of fare increases.

COLORED LABOR IN STEEL MILL TELL DISILLUSION

Reality Is Different Agents' Promises

This is the fifth of a series of articles about the twelve hour day and industry, written by a staff of the New York Times, who was assigned to investigate the United States Steel Corporation's mill at Homestead, Pa., the mills of the nearby town.

BY INDUSTRIALIST

Employment agents throughout the south, capitalizing the claims that the United States Steel Corporation is easy, are luring colored laborers to accept work in these mills. Several of the thousands sent to work here at Homestead to work hard and to get paid, claim they were told they would "easy, sitting down" jobs. To have good pay, ideal living conditions.

For several weeks these men have been migrating from the south to the corporation searching for work. They have found only of the hardest nature.

Promised "Two Lever" Jobs. One of the men said he had promised a "two lever" job, agent of the corporation in Tampa. All he would have to do would sit on the cushion of a car, operate the two controlling lever agent said.

The man, Washington, found self helping bricklayers, in the north department, repairing furnaces. Gas in them is at such pressure that it burns through brick walls. It is the duty of bricklayers to replace bricks in holes while the heat is on. The said to be as hot as any in the business. The white hot blast from the hole, burning, scorching.

Washington passed bricks, craftsmen for two days. Then sent to help two men patch a top of one of the furnaces. The blast was coming through the brick there was no escaping to the as when on the ground. The layers had the heat on. The men stood back from the blast, the bricks.

Platform in Flames. Perforation flowed from his steady stream. Two inch pipe on which the men were was blown into flames. Washington down and got transferred to the mon labor gang. Working on a day, at shoveling bricks and objects out of a hole, he tried down flat on his back.

The foreman argued, even then threatened to fire him. He took Washington to the office of John A. Giesler to effect his discharge in ten minutes Washington and again lay down, this time lasted.

"The other boys wouldn't fire me," he told the men. "They're afraid I'll tell the back home what work here is like. Men of the machine shop of that company officials either inspired, as Washington claimed, desire to keep the nature of mill secret or were showing favoritism to the man because of his race.

"If he had been a white man have gone out in a hurry," said "They're favoring him because want to fill the mill with labor."

In several departments of the steel works colored laborers of 40 to 50 per cent of the labor. Most of the labor gangs are

COLORED LABOR IN STEEL MILLS TELL DISILLUSION

Reality Is Different from Agents' Promises.

This is the fifth of a series of articles about the twelve hour day in the steel industry, written by a member of the staff of the New York Daily Mirror, who was assigned to work as a laborer in the United States Steel corporation's mill at Homestead, Pa., and in the mills of the nearby towns.

BY INDUSTRIALIST.

Employment agents throughout the country, capitalizing the claims that work in mills of the United States Steel corporation is easy, are persuading colored laborers to accept shipment to these mills. Several of the thousands sent to the corporation's works at Homestead, Pa., work hard at 40 cents an hour when they were told they would have "easy, sitting down" jobs. They were to have good pay, ideal living conditions.

For several weeks these men have been migrating from mill to mill of the corporation searching for the easy work. They have found only labor at the hardest nature.

Promised "Two Lever" Job. One of the men said he had been promised a "two lever" job by an agent of the corporation in Tennessee. All he would have to do would be to sit on the cushion of a crane and operate the two controlling levers, the agent said.

The man, Washington, found himself helping bricklayers, in the open hearth department, repairing the big furnaces. Gas in them is at such high pressure that it burns through the brick walls. It is the duty of the bricklayers to replace bricks in these holes while the heat is on. The job is said to be as hot as any in the steel business. The white hot blast pushes from the hole, burning, scorching, searing.

Washington passed bricks to the craftsmen for two days. Then he was sent to help two men patch a hole in one of the furnaces. The same thing was coming through the hole, but there was no escaping to fresh air, as when on the ground. The bricklayers had the hottest job. Washington stood back from the blast and handed them the bricks.

Platform in Flames. Perpiration flowed from him in a steady stream. Two inch pine planks on which the men were standing blazed into flames. Washington came down and got transferred to the common labor gang. Working on this two days, at shoveling bricks and other objects out of a hole, he tired and lay down flat on his back.

The foreman argued, swore, and then threatened to fire him. Finally he took Washington to the office of Supv. John A. Gumbel to effect his discharge. In ten minutes Washington returned and again lay down, this time unmolested.

"The other boss wouldn't let him fire me," he told the reporter. "They're afraid I'll tell the others back home what work here is like."

Men of the machine shop declare that company officials either were inspired, as Washington claimed, by a desire to keep the nature of mill work secret or were showing favoritism to the men because of his race.

"If he had been a white man he'd have gone out in a hurry," said one. "They're favoring him because they want to fill the mill with cheap labor."

In several departments of the Homestead works colored laborers compose 40 to 50 per cent of the labor force. Most of the labor gangs are made up

MR. GARY AND HIS WORKS ARE TOPIC AT WINONA LAKE

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Winona Lake, Ind., July 8.—[Special.]—The twelve hour workday was criticized today by Bishop F. J. McConnell of Pittsburgh at the Christian citizenship conference, but Gov. Arthur M. Hyde of Missouri, who was the afternoon speaker, made a complimentary allusion to E. H. Gary, head of the steel corporation, whose working hours have been the center of discussion.

"The reason I am opposed to a twelve hour working day," Bishop McConnell said, "is because a man hasn't much of a chance to become a Christian when thus employed."

A workman who was asked why he was against the twelve hour day replied that when he buried his 14 year old daughter he realized that he had never been acquainted with the girl. "I have another daughter 12 years old," he said, "and I am striking so that I can get a chance to get acquainted with her."

"To convert big business is not to kill it, but to give it a rebirth so that it will form a just background for civilization and for bringing in the kingdom of God."

Gov. Hyde's reference to Mr. Gary was: "In spite of all the stunts cast upon Judge Gary, it still remains that his statement to the steel corporation that the need of society is religion is true."

"If government is bad it means that the people want it bad, or are too stupid or indifferent to change it. The truth is that we do not need man laws, but an old fashioned change of heart."

The CADILLAC PHAETON

To the man who likes outdoor activities and outdoor pleasures, the Cadillac four-passenger Phaeton makes its strongest appeal. It is an ideal car for the "four-some," and is equally adapted to long trips for two where general luggage room in addition to trunk capacity is desired.

In ease of handling and in road performance the Cadillac Phaeton has all the advantages of the roadster. Sportsmanlike in appearance, having the air of the custom-built body, it suggests an eager readiness for mountains and trails where its innate ruggedness, power, and roadability make trips of exploration on uncharted roads a real delight.

MR. UNDERWOOD'S HAT.

Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama has tossed in his hat. He may be accepted as an active candidate for the Democratic nomination. We believe the Republicans would like nothing better than to have him as the opposing candidate with an issue as he outlined it in his statement.

Mr. Underwood is for the league of nations. He says that the United States deserted Europe. It has no policy towards Europe. It is drifting. It is without courage, he says, or conviction, "with out anything which goes to make a government a government."

He says that in deserting our post and running away from our obligations we are permitting Europe to ruin itself and, therefore, can find no markets for our agricultural surplus, and that the ruin of Europe is the ruin of the American farmer. It is Mr. Cox of Ohio speaking in the person of Mr. Underwood of Alabama. A plurality of 7,000,000 said no to Mr. Cox in 1920, and if Mr. Underwood thinks that the events in Europe since then have converted these voters the Republicans will be glad to put the question again.

Mr. Underwood's political calculation probably is to put himself in line for support from what remains of the Wilson sentiment. Thus, in addition to being known as a bit moist and a conservative, both helpful in the east, he becomes known as an internationalist appealing to the pacifists of the country, to some international bankers, and to people who seek decorations and social recognition abroad.

It is hard to believe that he is sincere in his description of the position of the United States in the affairs of the world, although it is the gulf which comes from many Democratic leaders. We had thought that Underwood kept proportion better in mind. He may believe that American farmers are being convinced their depressing springs from the failure of the United States to join the league of nations. He says so, but we believe, without sincerity.

His statement is a distortion of the truth. It would be true only if the United States were an aggressor in Europe seeking territory, maintaining a large army, embroiling all nations by its policies of force and coercion, and foremost in every conspiracy against the general peace. Then Mr. Underwood might have made his statement of America's betrayal of the world welfare and its violation of its pledges with truth and to the shame of the United States.

The truth is that not a single European trouble has had its cause in American action. The militant nations of continental Europe have not even been asked to pay their debts to the United States and have none but bankrupt trying to meet obligations to America.

The peace they made after the war was unjust and unworkable. It was not peace, but a continuation of war. The league, if it were intended in work, would work without the United States, which has no questions to submit to it, no acts of aggression to be checked by it, and which asks merely that the other nations produce an amicable settlement of their own affairs.

All the United States could contribute would be money and men in quarels and disputes not its own. If Mr. Underwood wants to send Alabama boys and Alabama money off on such an adventure he should say so. He has no remedy which the United States alone could give. He has merely the magic words, "Join the league of nations."

It is the old abstraction. If the Democratic candidate, when nominated, finds it the chief utterance of the Democratic platform we will probably have all the old arguments over again and we predict, to the same result. The most charitable construction of Mr. Underwood's statements is that before he tossed his hat in the ring he was talking through it.

AN ALL-AMERICAN POLICY.

The report that Peruvians celebrated in compliment to the United States the Fourth of July is a bit of evidence of friendly relations which is more than welcome. We have had a good deal of bitter criticism from our Latin American neighbors, and most of it has been unjust. Earlier in the history of the republics we were on better terms because we were doing them an obvious service in discouraging monarchist reaction and foreign oppression. But for many years there has been suspicion and friction, to our common injury. At this time we are aware of persistent efforts to fan enmity between us for the sake of trade advantages.

But we believe this propaganda is going to be defeated through the natural development of substantial ties between North and South America. If our language and our social traditions are different, our political institutions and principles, as well as a new world spirit we both share, give us a good basis of understanding. But beyond these considerations are substantial common interests of a material nature. South America needs our capital for the development of her magnificent resources. She needs many of our commodities, and we need many of hers. On the basis of American investment and an enlarged trade between us the South American nations will progress rapidly in wealth and prosperity.

With this profitable intercourse will come an all-

American peace in which suspicion and belligerent rivalries cannot survive. Europe, racked with wars and slowly recovering, offers neither to us nor our Latin American neighbors the opportunities we can open to one another. We have but to apply the lesson of distracted Europe to create an all-American system framed upon the natural economic relations of the two continents and governed by a determined will to maintain peace and perfect cooperation for our common prosperity.

WHY RAISE CITY TAXES?

In view of the proposal of Mayor Dever to have assessed valuations of Chicago property increased $750,000,000 in order to raise taxes to pay the city's expenses it may be pertinent to suggest that the mayor's commission considering this problem resolve itself into a sort of ways and means committee. Very likely it would be better, both politically and economically, for the administration to seek other means of adjusting financial difficulties.

When a business enterprise finds itself in such difficulties it searches for wastes which may be stopped and for sources of revenue or capital which have not been utilized to the best advantage. Similar activity on the part of a city would seem proper.

Chicago has just completed eight years of the most extravagant and wasteful government it has ever suffered. Because that government ran up costs and failed to live within its income is not sufficient reason why the present administration should not keep within proper limitations. There is little doubt that many wasteful and extravagant features of city government established by the Thompson administration still cling to the city hall. A wise administration would search them out to the last penny and eliminate these drains before talking of increasing the tax revenue.

Numerous other potential means of adjusting revenue to expenses suggest themselves. The Appellate court has held that Mayor Thompson and his associates, who obtained a gross revenue of $1,000,000 from the Municipal pier in the Pageant of Progress political stunt, are responsible to the city and must return the money received. The Tribune is prosecuting a suit against the Thompson experts who collected nearly $3,000,000 from the city in a year to force return of a large part of that money to the city treasury. A review of the garbage disposal system of the city shows that what is now a great liability, a single feature of which had cost $2,000,000 up to Jan. 1 last, might under proper direction become a source of income. Rigid collection of all delinquent taxes also would help.

Other possibilities of income and saving are numerous. If Mayor Dever's tax commission will extend its activities to searching them out and recommending their use, it is likely to find that no increase of tax revenue is necessary. If some increase is still necessary, the taxpayers of the community will submit much more cheerfully if they know that all reasonable efforts have been made to save them from such added burdens.

CHICAGO A SEAPORT.

A miniature illustration of what Chicago would become with the opening of the St. Lawrence seaway is promised for Aug. 15. On that date the first of a fleet of sixteen steel steamships organized for the Great Lakes-Atlantic service will leave this port with a cargo for England. The announcement is made by agents for a Norwegian owner who will operate the line.

Because of the present limitations of the Welland and St. Lawrence canals these vessels must be comparatively small. The experiment of shipping from the lakes to Europe is correspondingly handicapped. The small steamers which can pass through these canals must operate at a greater overhead cost per ton than regular ocean going ships would operate. They must traverse not only a long stretch of canals and negotiate many locks, but must navigate considerable distances of difficult river channel. Their time must be slow and their expenses high. Still, the venture has been carefully figured and is expected to succeed.

If it does succeed, as expected, it will be because such transportation of heavy freight is economically superior to transportation by a combination of rail and water carriers, with attendant high costs of transferring cargoes. That is what advocates of the proposed St. Lawrence seaway have been arguing for years. The improved seaway cannot fail to save the farmers of this country many millions of dollars annually in freight rates on their products, and at the same time must provide hydroelectric power which should pay its cost and greatly stimulate industry within the radius of its service.

No better argument could be conceived in favor of the seaway than the demonstration of the fleet of little cargo boats which will make Chicago a seaport. If they can operate under the handicaps mentioned they will prove conclusively that a tremendous fleet of much larger vessels could operate through the improved seaway. If they should fail under these handicaps they will furnish an additional reason why the improvement should be accomplished.

Editorial of the Day

THE KEEPERS OF THE LAND.

(Cedar Rapids, (Ia.) Gazette.)

It used to be estimated that a sound increase in farm land value was about 10 per cent each year, but between 1910 and 1920 the average price of farm land in Iowa rose 300 per cent. During the years 1919-20, when the peak prices were reached, Iowa land was selling at seven times the price that prevailed in 1910. It is estimated that in 1919 about 15 per cent of Iowa farms changed hands. As results Iowa rural schools, churches and communities confronted many new problems and farmers found themselves facing after war high taxation with inflated farm values and depressed markets. Farmers began to call for credit and organized to fight for better prices. For three years the Iowa farmer has had a nervous time. But he has profited by his experience. He has learned some vital things about farm prices and the impossibility of making money on $500 land. He has developed a better understanding of banking and has learned some things about cooperation that will increase his prosperity from now on.

There are some remarkable things about the way the Iowa farmers have weathered the financial crisis that followed the war. Relatively few of Iowa's farmers went under. They have kept their local and political sanity and developed their knowledge of economics and social organization. Among the many things the people of Iowa have learned is that a boom of farm land prices is more dangerous than a boom of city real estate and that for both city and country it is economically foolish to depart from normal land prices that are in keeping with general conditions.

The climbing path of my advancing years
Impels my lagging feet to dullest plains
Than those they trod in glees through April lanes
And wistful paths in June. The lark's tears
That for a moment shed in Spring:
They all are dried—alms mopped by the sun
Into a vapour from which dreams are spun.
My years are phantoms, and return to bring
Their burdened bag of shadowed memories
Unto the dusty doorstep of my heart:
For me to linger over and to say:
"I am a ship far out on Autumn seas;
And these the trusty compass and the chart
That guide me back into the ports of May!"

FRESH evidence comes of political activity by the K. K. K. Bidik tells us that, reading the just published Laws of the Iowa Fortieth General Assembly, he finds "An Act relating to the trapping of furbearing animals and providing for the protection of skunks." "AND I'LL NOT BELIEVE MY NAME!"
(New York (N.Y.) Journal.)

Arrested on a charge of malicious mischief after turning in a false fire alarm, Dong Dongs, a Chinese, is in Bellevue Hospital for observation.

MERCY beaucoup & M. Georges Chandler, le libraire benévoles de la Rue Van Buren, we are come into a novel for which we have been seeking: "Piracy" by Michael Arlen. The child, when a book in the uncertain commercial stage of "Piracy" is in discussion, we know, along this line: "Arlen? . . . Arlen! . . . Yes! Yes—yes—yes! I place him now. I've read some of his other things, of course, and must get on to 'Piracy' now that I know it's his. Glad you mentioned it!"

YOU'LL be glad we mentioned it, we know, if you put [get], read, and like it: if you like it not, the fault lies within you, and is no concern of THIS LADY'S. Meanwhile, 'twill be just as well that you say nothing about Arlen's earlier things; inasmuch as he appears to have written nothing else. We know nothing to his discredit save that somebody is bullying him as George Moore Jr., which is no way to speak or write of the author of "Piracy." He may write something else as good or better; he may write nothing else worth time; or he may "rewrite Piracy" under other titles, after the fashion of the one-book men who get a taste of royalties and good-notion; whatever else he does or doesn't, "Piracy" is his, and not George Moore's, or Bernard Shaw's, or Oscar Wilde's, or any other person's.

OUT of it we get the reaction to good workmanship which comes occasionally from a modern novel, as with Mrs. Wharton's "The Age of Innocence," and to a story thought out ere it was written, as with Tarkington's "Alice Adams"; and there is no comparison in the matter and manner of "Piracy" with either of the American books.

TWO FORDS CLASH AT EGG HARBOR

Both Roll Over Near Proctor's Mill;
One Suffers Dislocated Shoulder, —Other's Escape.

CHANNING POLLOCK'S epistle to the play-critics, as recorded in yesterday's issue by Burns Mantle, has the merits of wit and wit, and mostly, sensibility. When he was a critic, he was, we are sure, one of the things he doesn't like in critics now that he is a playwright; and his special business as a critic was to keep the public from buying tickets for plays like "The Fool," which seems to be a play for which the public will buy a great many tickets in the next year or so. . . . And we're sorry to say this, for Mr. Pollock, fortunately, is not in the authentic list of persons we like.

WHAT has ever worried us about the job of dramatic-critic is that we have never yet met a man, a woman, or a prohibitionist lacking in the rapid flash that God and destiny designed him, her, or it for that work, if for nothing else. The dramatic-critic is the soul of every drama, every play, every story. Even when, after a year's novitiate, he is unable to compose a printable three-line account of a small fire or a petty crime, and is told to get out, the lad invariably counters with the request that he be provided with a chance on the theater.

In a minor lifetime of observant activity in and among the plays and their impediments, we have known—apart from ourselves, that is, fewer than eight accredited critics correctly equipped for the task, and the count takes in the celebrities of other lands. . . . No attention will be paid to requests for information accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THAT the Messrs. Stevens, Hall, Collins, and his other colleagues may not feel slighted, we think it well to explain that "Battling Butler," billed for the new season in the Apollo Theater, is not a drama by John Drinkwater based on the life and times of THE TRIBUNE'S critic.

RAILROAD CAMPS, OLD AND NEW.

IN the Santa Fe Magazine for June Mr. Norton of Chanute, Kas., writes of the old fashioned construction camps in which lived the men who built the Santa Fe railroad. In 1877 the grasshoppers and the drought had put the farmers out of business, and with a group of his neighbors, left the grasshoppers chewing on the fence posts and went, with their coffee, to Lyons, Kas., to help build the railroad.

The housing problem was settled by whatever means happened to be at hand. Some had tents, some built dugouts, some living in the hollows of old logs. Many lived in covered wagons, while some roiled in bunkhouses, the beds of which were infested by hordes of hungry gray-backs and bedbugs.

The majority of the men formed crews and boarded themselves. Beans, bacon, and bread were staples of consumption on weekdays and potatoes, dried apples and peaches, rice, eggs, and coffee, and flapjacks comprised the Sunday menu.

Just a word or two of addition to this picture of an old day construction camp. Very rudimentary toilet facilities, a world of flies, dirt, and dust all over the food, a heavy sickness rate, a beginning graveyard on a nearby hill.

I remember one railroad that was built by convicts. The nearby graveyard for that camp was fairly populous.

Sickness, horse and mule, and the prevalence in these old time camps would not be tolerated today. In fact, in some states the inspection and policing of camps now forms an important part of the work of state health departments.

Within a day after reading Mr. Norton's story I went by a modern railroad construction camp. The men were living in cheap and simple but fairly sanitary, temporary houses. The windows and doors were screened against flies and mosquitoes. The houses were located so as to get some drainage away from them and removed a little distance from the breeding places of insects and from the breeding ponds. There were toilets constructed in a way approved by health inspectors. The water supply was protected.

One informed that the sickness rate in construction camps is not now excessive and that on some railroads even the bridge crews get through without having high malaria and typhoid rates. In the language of Brother Gardner, "The world do move."

YOU MAY SMOKE THEM.
M. R. writes: Just what is the harm in smoking cigars, by a 45 year old woman, who keeps on for five or six a day?

Four or five cigars a day is not a harmful allowance.

NEW DIVORCE LAW.

Chicago, July 3.—(To the Friend of the People.)—1. Must a man wait one year after his divorce to marry again?

2. Was a law passed in Illinois recently that permits marriage before the year is up?

1. Not under the present law.
2. Yes.

CLEANING RUGS.

Chicago, July 3.—(To the Friend of the People.)—In these an ordinance against shading rugs from the second floor. All the dirt comes in our door and windows. I have spoken to the person who does this, but the practice is continued.

A city ordinance prohibits shading rugs where the dust will pass into occupied premises. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SECRETARY DAVIS ON THE ENROLLMENT OF IMMIGRANTS.

Washington, July 3.—Any attention has been called to a recent editorial in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE discussing the proposed law for the enrollment of aliens in the United States. It is with regret that I find that you are inclined to class this solely needed legislation as paternalistic and bureaucratic. I am sure that careful study of the proposal would convince you that it is neither.

There is no intention in our effort to provide for the enrollment of the naturalized alien, to establish any system of espionage, to "follow them into their homes and places of employment," as you phrase it. It is proposed simply that the alien shall register himself annually, over a period of years, or until he becomes a citizen. There is nothing new or startling in the proposal, for every American citizen under the law is registered before he can exercise his right of suffrage. I have no fear that the system of enrollment would be to establish a political spy organization.

But we must wage ruthless warfare against violators of the law. At present our immigration laws are difficult to enforce. Literally thousands of aliens enter the country surreptitiously despite every effort of the federal officials to prevent it. Our extensive land borders and our vast seacoasts offer every opportunity to the smuggler of aliens, who works hand in hand with the smuggler of illicit rum and illicit narcotics. If we employed the whole army and navy, and enlisted the aid of every state and municipal police force, I doubt that we could completely suppress the smuggling of aliens. A solution of this problem, the enrollment plan combines efficiency with economy.

I agree with you that in multiplicity of laws there lies a real danger, but I am clear that we must have the machinery to enforce the laws we have made. This objection to new laws can, of course, be carried to absurd limits. Recently you editorially endorsed changes in our immigration laws, and in making it effective, it should be coupled with the proposal to register aliens. Your objection that the enrollment plan means more job holders, more bureaucracy, is hardly supported by the facts. We already have in the bureau of naturalization practically all the personnel required to administer the system. This bureau has the active cooperation of the State Department, the judicial and church organizations throughout the country. It would be able to administer the enrollment law with practically no increase in employees.

As you know, I am an immigrant myself. I know that the immigrant who comes to America in good faith, ready to make his home here, ready to accept American ideals and American institutions will have no objection to the enrollment plan. On the contrary, I know by experience that he will welcome every opportunity for closer contact with the things that are America, and these opportunities will be increased through the enrollment plan.

I am preparing a series of letters in relation to our immigration problem, and I should be glad to submit them for your consideration. I am sure that you will agree with me that the problem calls for public discussion, in every community throughout the country.

JAMES J. DAVIS.

CONCRETE VS. BRICK.

Chicago, July 3.—Several communications have appeared in your columns lately about the impossibility of getting permission to use concrete building units in Chicago. This situation in our city actually amounts to a scandal. Any one who has interest in building here knows this.

In our entire city could composed of brickmakers or brick masons? It is ridiculous to say concrete is not proper material to use. If it is not, why does every other city in the country use it?

This brickbush situation in Chicago does not stop at building units; it is every conceivable form of construction on buildings, streets, alleys, or sidewalks it is almost impossible, apparently.

In a recent issue of the morning papers this matter was brought up by the controversy with Commissioner Sloan regarding the catch basin on Maryland Avenue. Although concrete was distinctly specified and approved by Mr. Sloan, the council definitely voted for brick catch basin construction. To one of the "common people" it certainly looks as though the thing were wrong. J. D. MARRAS.

WHY NOT COLLECT DELINQUENT TAXES RATHER THAN INCREASE ASSESSMENTS?

Chicago, July 4.—In reference to Mayor Dever's appeal for increasing assessments for purposes of relieving the delinquency in finances, I would suggest, instead, that he use his influence in urging, if not compelling, the proper officials to fulfill their duties to the people by collecting delinquent taxes, especially from those who are well able to pay them. This would, it seems to me, be a more fair action in that it would not embarrass the struggling individuals and de-

RUSSIA TURNING TO INDIVIDUALISM, NEW YORKERS SAY

Bush Urges U. S. Contact with Soviets.

BY LARRY RUE.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)
CONSTANTINOPLE, July 8.—The United States should establish official contact with Russia, which is anxious to restore American property seized during the revolution and to pay its debts to America. Official recognition should be withheld until the experience following the contact thus established proves the sincerity and good will of the soviet government.

This is the recommendation of IRVING T. BUSH, Irving T. Bush, president of the New York chamber of commerce, who arrived here today after a two weeks' visit in Moscow.

America will gain nothing now by recognizing Russia, which is anxious to establish contact, he said. By recognizing Russia, England and Germany will get their blight for a mess of pottage.

Abandoning Communism.

"I wish to emphasize that communism has proved an utter failure and the policy abandoned and Russia has recovered economically in proportion to going back to a policy of individualism," Mr. Bush declared.

Mr. Bush declared he used the word

XAVIER PAOLI, WHO GUARDED KINGS FOR 30 YEARS, IS DEAD

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

PARIS, July 8.—Xavier Paoli, police official and "guardian of kings," who arranged former Emperor Eugenie's escape to England, died today at the age of 91.

M. Paoli retired from the French secret service in March, 1903, after thirty years' service, as France's special guardian of royal visitors. During that time he protected the lives of kings, queens, and princes in France, of Queen Victoria of England, and of the Russian Emperor and Empress, King Leopold of Belgium, King Gustav of Sweden, King Edward VII. of England, King Alfonso of Spain, the empress of Austria, and many other notables. He became a fast friend of Queen Victoria, who conferred special honors upon him.

M. Paoli was born at La Fort, Corsica, in 1832.

Individualism in preference to capitalism because the former was more correct in that the policy of giving peasant workers the fruits of their own labor was more individualistic than capitalism.

Experience has convinced even the most rabid communists that their theory is impossible because the farmer refused to work for the state, and the result was economic collapse and stagnation," he added. He said he believed even Leon Trotsky, with whom he had a heart to heart talk, was convinced that the communistic theory could not be worked.

See Benefits in Revolution.

"I am convinced, however, that the leaders of the revolution are sincere, and while the experience of Russia, at a terrific cost of life and wealth, proves the impracticability of their ideas, I believe the movement will be beneficial," he declared.

"The Russian peasants are now actually released from serfdom. Roumania and Poland have also been forced to divide up land among the farmers."

Although Mr. Bush met the outstanding figures of the soviet government, he met no one whom he believed capable of taking Nicolai Lenin's place. The triumvirate, however, is composed of capable men. M. Trotsky's power has greatly been weakened by M. Lenin's collapse, as each is a complement to the other, M. Lenin representing the background of business and M. Trotsky a genius of irresponsible, determined action. M. Kamanoff is intelligent but incapable of filling M. Lenin's shoes.

Slain as Bandit

AS HE GROPE IN DARK FOR SNAKE

Italy, Tex., July 8.—Groping in the dark before daybreak, trying to put his hands on his pet rattlesnakes, C. M. Howell, patent medicine manufacturer, Fort Worth, was mistaken for a highwayman and shot to death.

Howell, who uses a den of live rattlers in giving demonstrations before crowds over Texas, drove his car upon a bridge, heading for Hillsboro. The rattlesnakes, caught on a bridge railing and smashed, the snakes still and slipping quickly out along the road.

Howell jumped out, placed some snakes back in the car, added by his headlights, but he wanted to light a match to find the others. Another car came along. Howell went forward to ask for a match. The other man thought Howell was a bandit and fired.

CLINNIN PRAISES COLORED TROOPS IN WORLD WAR

A tribute to the bravery and heroism of colored troops in the A. E. F. was paid by Gen. John V. Clinlin in an address yesterday before the American Legion.

"When the history of America in the world war is written and the participants are awarded their niches in the hall of fame," he said, "there will appear, as active contenders for the laurel wreath, many men whose line of ancestry leads back through the slave marts of this country to the freedom of the veldt and jungle of darkest Africa."

"It mattered not what the task assigned, on the docks or the roads, in the trenches or lines of communication, the American colored service man did his bit cheerfully, smilingly, singing. He gave the best that was in him for the land he called home."

"The colored man of America has not had equal opportunity. He has copied the white man's vices and has not been taught his virtues. Give him education and industrial training, a fair chance, and he will bring up his own standards to the equal of the highest."

Summer Hosiery To Suit the Occasion and the Costume

THERE is a satisfying peace of mind which comes with knowing that when vacation trunks are packed, you have Stockings ready for every costume contingency that may arise.

The cycle of a summer day, translated in terms of Hosiery, demands somewhat of a variety; and from the energetic nine holes in the morning, through the gala tea or garden party in the afternoon, to the informal dance, your Hosiery must be in keeping with both costume and occasion. The following items are selected from our large assortment as being especially suitable for vacation needs.

White Lace-Clocked Hose, $2.75 and $3.

A good weight, lustrous white Stocking with open lace clocks in two patterns. With silk tops, $3; cotton tops, $2.75.

"Field Special" Hose, $3.25 With Embroidered Clocks

An excellent white Stocking for all round summer wear, finished with hand embroidered clocks of various colors.

Chiffon Hose, $2.25

These are an excellent quality of sheer chiffon finished with a four-inch garter top, which makes them much more durable than the ordinary chiffon Stocking. The quality, too, is unusually fine for such a low priced Stocking. In many colors.

The Secret of Want Ad Success

The price was $25.00. I was to pay from $15.00 to $20.00 very cheerfully, for I was at an end, and in despair. As a last resort, I offered to pay the balance of $10.00, but the price was $25.00, the price of a make acquaintance, no considerable benefits to be derived from a business investment coming along which time I was in of ready money. I said to the doctor, "I will give you $10.00, and you will have the advantage of these golden days and I will have more than I need, a condition that I agree with which I can do the better in the future." The doctor, in answer to my arguments at my sister's very parents was still positive and said that I was to pay the balance of $10.00, and that I was to have the advantage of these golden days and I will have more than I need, a condition that I agree with which I can do the better in the future.

How I Got Perfect Foot Health and Real Shoe Comfort

First, he said, you told me that I am nearly thirty years of age and that I work as much of a fool, and that I have been blessed with good health since childhood. Getting old is something I have never experienced, but I have never felt that I had reached a point where I am no longer young.

[illegible][illegible]

I called at his place and after a short wait was ushered into his private study. He very thoroughly examined my bare feet. The Grubbs seemed perfectly oblivious to him and he asked a few questions. He then drew an outline of each foot on a printed chart, and then he asked me to stand on a platform. It was quite apparent that my arches were not to be made by gesso. When I thought he had all the data that one pair of shoes could give him, he turned to the Grubbs and said: "I have a vessel of water and a roll of cloth impregnated with plaster of paris. He now caused the child to stand in the water and then proceeded to wind my feet with it. They were entirely covered with a thin coat which he fastened all at the top.

He now had perfect molds of my feet, with which he could produce exact models, and over the models build perfect fitting shoes. I left him feeling that I had placed my feet in master hands.

A week later I put on the stained shoes and we came out of the office. They were so breaking in; they were comfortable and I was glad and so easy on my feet as a glove is on the hand. Moreover, they were light and shapely and completely suited my present notions of taste—further, they were made in New York, N.Y., and I bought them at a sale on Nov. 12th, 1912, at the same place where I bought the shoes I wore the afternoon of Jan. 17th, 1913. I was the only one who got any except when they were being resoled. I had them well-soled and the heels lasted up four times. They lasted well and they are still capable of any more wear than the old shoes and they are still as good as new and spread under my weight as much as shoes always have.

[illegible]

I walk now more than ever, and my general health is now better, a condition that I attribute largely to the healthy and pleasure with which I can move about the open air. I have all the spring in my step that I had twenty years ago, and seldom see a man of my age and weight who can cover the pavements at my stride. My experience convinces me that many persons who suffer from what they imagine to be rheumatism can find quick and gratifying relief by calling on Martin Larson. Further, that by so doing, they can at smaller cost move more comfortably than ever before.

FRED DE WITT JONES,
602 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

I AM the master-builder of shoes for all feet! My entire business life of more than thirty-five years has been devoted to scientific shoe-building for the relief of foot sufferers. Sore feet, weak ankles, broken-down arches, corns, bunions, calluses, pains in the limbs, often diagnosed by physicians as chronic rheumatism, and many painful body ills are the result of poorly fitting shoes. 90% of these ailments are unnecessary—proper fitting shoes make them disappear.

The Larson Plaster Cast System of Shoe Building

These shoes are made by a special plaster-paris process. The fact that no two pair of feet are alike makes the Larson Plaster-Cast System absolutely essential. You know your right foot is different from your left. Shoes made on an average last simply cannot fit, but by this scientific method your shoes are practically made on your feet, for we make exact duplicates of them. Thus you get the shaped shoes nature intended you to wear.

MIRACLES NOT NECESSARY, M. E. TEACHER SAYS

Des Plaines Attendance Records Broken.

"Miracles are no longer taken as reasons for belief in Christianity. That day is past. The man who says that miracles are essential to belief does not know the history of the life of Jesus. Even he was reluctant to perform miracles."

"This was the crux of the message delivered to several thousand Methodists who attended the camp meeting last night at Des Plaines. The speaker was Prof. Edmund D. Soper of Northwestern university and a leader in the church."

Attendance records at Des Plaines were shattered at the afternoon camp meeting. Official figures showed that there were 1,000 on the camp grounds.

"There will be no sign, such as is referred to in the Bible, in this generation," Prof. Soper said, "Jesus denied the importance of miracles as evidence of his divinity."

An appeal to stand by the established faith of the church was the key note of the sermon given in the afternoon by the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, pastor of the St. James' Methodist Episcopal church.

"Hoot the Old Hoots."

"It was Bob Ingersoll who said, 'Look at the solemn faced ministers. Hear them—they are still hooting the same old hoot.' And I'll repeat that is what we are doing and proud to do. Hoot the same old hoot. It is a wonderful old hoot. May it never grow faint," the speaker said.

"Why shouldn't we stick to the old, the established, the tested, the tried?" he asked.

"Why at this hour when we are so richly endowed by the past and all that it has given to us, should we flout it in the pursuit of modernities as yet unproven?"

"I have known many men in my lifetime, rich men and poor men, but I have never yet known a man who was willing to give up the possessions he inherited from his parents. And yet I have known many men who let go of their spiritual and religious inheritance without a qualm."

"Amen" and "Hallelujahs" greeted the Rev. Mr. Wedderspoon on all sides.

After the Rev. Mr. Wedderspoon's address, the Armour-Gies club gave a sacred concert. In the evening Prof. Soper gave an address on "What Is a Miracle and Do Miracles Happen?"

Criticism Church's Attitude.

At the morning service the Rev. George H. Gross, president of Des Plaines university, preached on "The Present Tendencies in Religion."

He denounced the attitude of the churches, saying that they were paying too much attention to organization, rules, and doctrines and not enough attention to the spiritual side of religion and the social gospel.

Groups formed for certain objectives were also criticized.

The Methodist preachers of Chicago and of Rock River conference will have a complimentary luncheon at 1 o'clock today. Afterwards there will be a meeting of the Camp Ground association. In the afternoon Miss Evelyn Carlson will lead a children's meeting. In the evening there will be Young People's services and an address by Prof. Soper on "What Becomes of a Man When He Dies?"

PAY TILT DRIVE BY BIG FOUR OF RAIL UNIONS NEAR

Another of railway labor's current series of wage increase drives is expected to develop at a meeting today in the Capitol building of leaders of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

About 170 general chairmen and others are scheduled to attend.

Although no formal announcement has been made, reports are that similar action soon will be considered by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

The Big Four brotherhood chiefs emphasize the fact that they have not made an aggressive wage fight in years. But now, according to L. E. Sheppard, head of the conductors' organization, sentiment favors a pay boost.

The brotherhoods have contracts with the carriers which will remain in force until either side serves notice of desire to negotiate new terms.

WATCHMAN ENDS OWN LIFE.

Moonshine and domestic difficulties are believed to have led Thomas Hodo, 60 years old, a watchman, to shoot himself through the head yesterday at his home at 1321 Wabash street.

Body Found in River Not That of Lewis E. Larson

Believed at first to be that of Lewis E. Larson, former secretary of the board of education who disappeared months ago, the body of an unidentified man about 40 years old was taken from the south branch of the Chicago river yesterday at Halsted street. The body had been in the water about three months.

Attorney Harper E. Osborn, 155 North Clark street, through whom a reward of $1,000 has been offered for finding Larson, declared the body was not that of the missing man.

Lots of cool clothes; lots of style

It's easy to take care of the cool part; thin fabrics do that. But only fine tailoring will take care of style. So we insist on the finest needlework. So should you.

Doris Blake

Letting Opportunity Slide

Dear Miss Blake: My best girl friend has introduced me to a very handsome fellow. He seems to like me and has asked me if I cared to go out with him. But I refused to answer him questions that moment and told him I would let him know the following Sunday. But he never showed up since then.

I have not seen him since four months, but happen to come across him one day. I was with my girl friend. He stopped and began to speak to me. I just gave him a few words, but spoke very cool to him. He insisted on having my phone number. I gave it to him. He called me up and spoke very kindly to me.

Now, dear Miss Blake, can you be kind enough as to tell me what to do, because I still love him. Anxious.

When he called up, Anxious, that was the time for you to have invited him to call. You see, dear, even the handsome ones must be given a bit of encouragement.

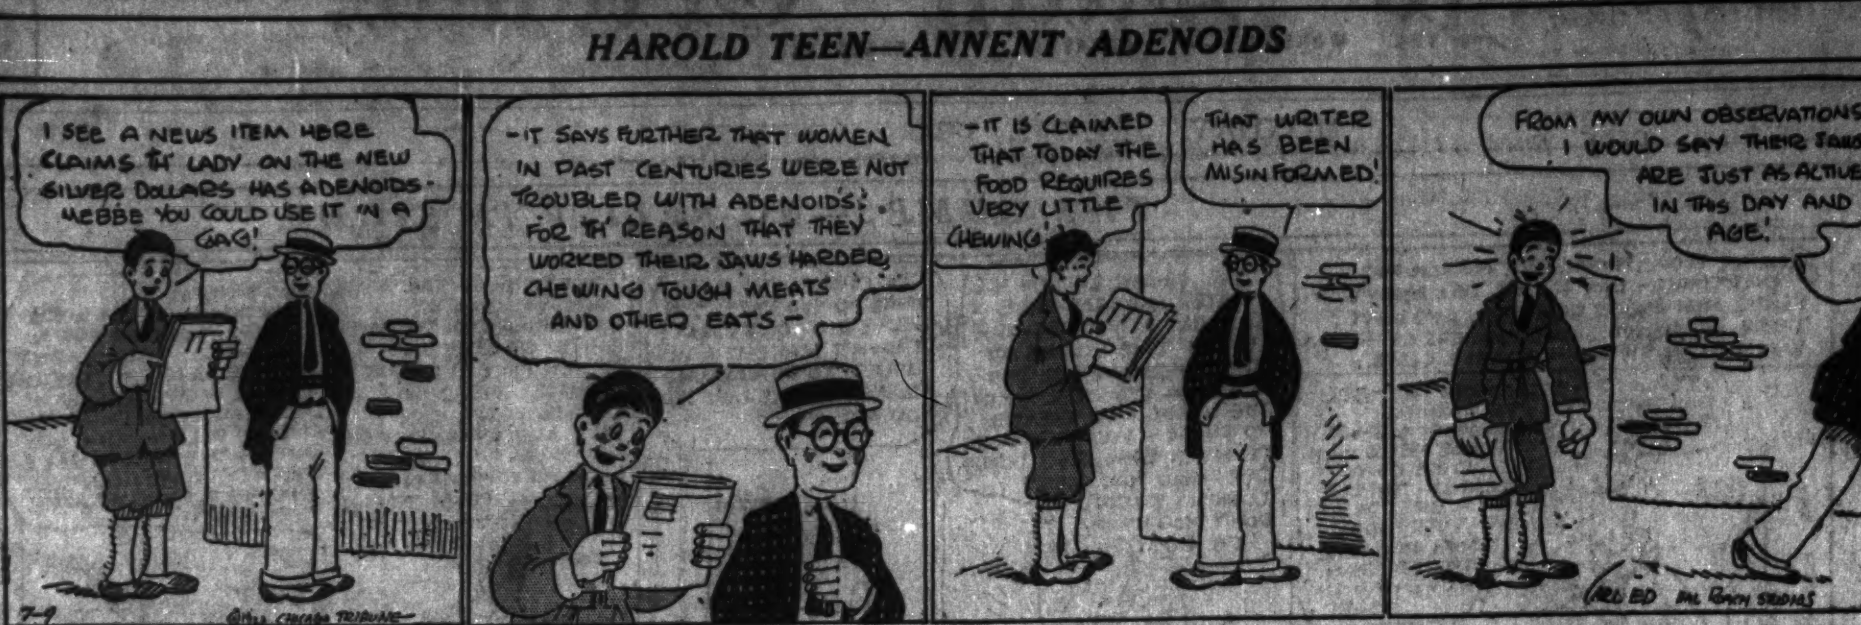

Pray Omit the Flowers.

Dear Miss Blake: Is it proper for a young lady to write flowers to an out-of-town gentleman friend on his birthday, besides sending a telegram of congratulations?

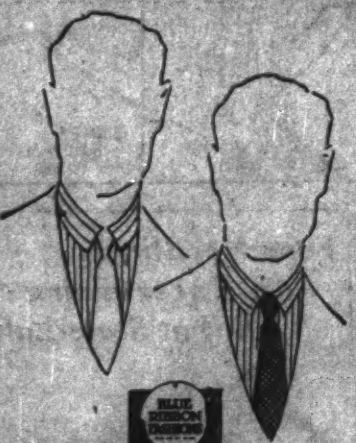

Q. T. Well, if I were a gentleman I think I would be slightly embarrassed at receiving flowers from a young lady. For goodness' sake, let this prerogative remain with the other sex. We women are encroaching upon too many of the privileges which should remain their peculiar right. Women, spare the flowers, I say please!

"Little Church Around Corner" Is Actors' Now

New York, July 8.—For many years the "Little Church Around the Corner" has been, in sentiment, the actors' church. Hereafter it will be so in reality, for the Rev. Randolph Ray, its pastor, has offered space in the parish house, which adjoins the church, as permanent headquarters of the Actors' Church alliance, recently reorganized, with George Arliss, stage and screen star, as president.

MEN'S FASHIONS

BY A. T. GALLOCO.

What's Wrong Here?

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence).—The summer necktie, an affair that makes its appearance with the commensurate rise of the mercury, is worn by the well dressed and the best dressers, but with one or two reservations. Prints, figured broadcloths and attractive colored ties of various washable materials, which we have treated in other articles, are worn and brighten up the costumes considerably.

But one harbinger of hot weather, the white wash tie, is being forced into the background, especially the dingy, stringy kind that used to be all the rage. It looks neither neat nor attractive, especially when worn with shirts of solid color. Recently, within a short space of time, I saw one of these white wash ties first on an all blue shirt, and later on a tan. Neither was pleasing. On the other hand, the exact reverse, a solid blue or tan tie on a white shirt would be and is most attractive. The tie should always be as dark or darker than the shirt worn.

Fashionists.

The tuxedo is never correctly worn at afternoon weddings. The garment has absolutely no standing until after 8 p. m.

All the beauty and attractiveness of a new and well chosen tie is sacrificed if the knot is tied in a slipshod manner.

The car had been freshly waxed and polished when a cat playing on top jumped to the hood, where she found insecure footing.

Elliot said, "Oh, mother, you just ought to have seen kittle. She couldn't collect herself."

Uncle presented Charles with a small automobile, just big enough for one passenger.

Charles admitted it from all sides and before he got in said, "Where's the extra tire? I guess I better get some gas."

TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Sunshine Cake.

A request for a recipe for a sunshine cake reminds me of how persistent generation after generation of cooks have been in making cakes of the sponge type with lemon flavor which often brings out the sulphur in the egg yolk, and gives what is to me an abominable flavor; also how persistent they have been in adding baking powder, which makes the cakes dryer than they need to be—the eggs rightly treated provide leaven enough; and how persistently they have baked these cakes in ungreased pans, though greasing gives the moist and pleasant surface, and so forth.

A common formula for sunshine cake is: Seven egg yolks, five egg whites, one-fourth teaspoon of cream tartar, if you think you must have it, one cup of sifted sugar—you have to discover for yourself whether you can get as good effects with granulated as with powdered—one cup of flour sifted several times, favoring.

The method I think best is to beat the whites till stiff and dry, and then to beat in as much of the cup of sugar as you can easily with the egg beater. Beat the yolks till they give a fine grainy froth, and beat the rest of the sugar into them, then combine two mixtures thoroughly and fold the flour into them.

With an even, strong oven, a continuous temperature of 300 degrees for one hour will give a cake of the right texture and surface, but you know your oven. Perhaps you can get four different effects with a batter divided into four parts and baked at the same time in its different quarters with a thermometer registering evenly.

This is a dark, grainy, black and white image, likely a scan of a book cover or endpaper. The surface is heavily textured with noise and speckles. A prominent horizontal line runs across the lower portion of the image, possibly indicating a fold or a binding edge. There are some faint, indistinct shapes and marks scattered throughout, but no legible text or identifiable figures are present.

LONDON MARKET HAS TOUGH WEEK OF PESSIMISM

BY ROBERT STEELE

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

LONDON, July 8.—A dull, depressing week was passed by the London financial markets with prices everywhere on the decline and pessimism daily increasing. To begin with the political situation continued indefinite if not critical. Then came the increase in the bank rate from 2 to 4 per cent, which was received at first with equanimity but later became an alarming step to many who were fearful that it would be further increased to 5 per cent.

This caused a spasm of forced selling mostly on American account. The weakened sentiment in the gilt edged section spread to other departments until the entire list was affected.

Hit by Weakness of Sterling.

The weakness of sterling on the New York exchange and fluctuations of continental currencies reacted on most of the specialties, with the result that the pound was general.

The Austrian loan fell sharply toward the end of the week. The home railroads had to contend with domestic strikes as well as external influences, in the shape of threatening labor troubles, which have been gathering here as a result of the dockers' strike. Foreign rails were easier.

There were few satisfactory features in the industrial, but these were soon swallowed up in the general depression. The leaders slackened off all around, including tobacco, textiles, cement and steel.

Oils Are Steady.

The oil market was about the steadiest, with a fair amount of buying which developed during the middle of the week, leading the bears to cover their tracks promptly. Mexican Eagle, which was running wild, settled down and became comparatively firm, actually showing a

DOLLAR LAST WEEK WORTH 64.8 CENTS UPON 1913 BASIS

In terms of the wholesale prices of twenty representative commodities the purchasing power of a dollar last week was 64.8 cents, compared with what it would have bought in 1913. The commodity prices averaged 184 per cent of prewar level. There are the figures of Prof. Irving Fisher's weekly index. In the following table the index number shows prevailing prices compared with those of 1913, and the purchasing power represents what $1 would buy in the periods covered comparable with 1913:

	Index number	Purchasing power
1913, May (week of price)	100	100.0
1923, May (week of price)	184	64.8
1923, January (low)	135	73.5
1923, January (high)	167	60.2
1923, February average	162	61.7
1923, March average	168	60.2
1923, April average	167	60.9
1923, May average	184	64.8
1923, June average	182	63.2
1923, week ended June 30	184	64.8
1923, last week	184	64.8

gain at the close. Other leaders recovered towards the close, and opinion now is that a recovery has definitely set in. Mines were uninteresting, but prices showed a certain amount of resistance. Kaffirs were particularly steady, owing largely to the improvement in the paper price of gold. Dealers were disposed to consider the rise in the bank rate a bull point on the precedent that bears money frequently has made for better prices in Kaffirs.

D. & R. G. R. R. Will Spend $2,719,700 for Repairs

Improvements amounting to $2,719,700 are to be made by the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad at its shop facilities at Denver, Pueblo, Salida, Grand Junction, Alamosa and Salt Lake City. Officials of the road estimate that the improvements will make possible such a reduction in the percentage of equipment out of service for repairs that it will be equivalent to adding thirty-seven locomotives and 173 freight cars to the system.

6% National Loan of 1920

Notice to Holders of Temporary Certificates Counter-signed for Identification by Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

At the request of THE GOVERNMENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC notice is hereby given that the holders of temporary certificates for the above bonds which are so counter-signed are requested to present them forthwith to the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, for the purpose of effecting the exchange for certificates in definitive form.

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York will issue its receipts for such deposited temporary certificates which will be cancelled and transmitted through the medium of the French Consulate to France. It will probably take about three months to accomplish each exchange so holders are urged to present their temporary certificates promptly in order to receive the definitive bonds prior to the next interest date.

The definitive certificates will be issued in denominations of 100, 200, 500, 1,000 or 10,000 Francs and will bear the coupons due December 16, 1923 and subsequent.

The French Government advises that it will bear the expense of postage and insurance involved in the return of such counter-signed certificates to the depositors.

FINANCING MAY BE EASY TO HELP GRAIN MARKETS

By CHARLES MICHAELS.

Factors over which farmers and the grain trade have no control, but which, it would seem, they might remedy, are largely responsible for the present unsatisfactory position from a producer's standpoint. Unless there is an immediate effort to narrow the extreme difference now prevailing between food products and manufactured commodities, something must be done to give way with unpleasant results to all concerned. It would be for the best interests of all to inflate grain and agricultural values to correspond with city labor costs. Much can be done by financing.

There are at the present time, according to the best posted men in the grain trade, three factors that are largely responsible for the low price. First is the foreign political and financial situation. Second, extremely high labor costs. The largely increased cost of transportation, and third, the lack of speculative trading. The main factor in causing the extremely wide spread between the average price of agricultural products and the price of manufactured commodities is the high labor cost in producing the latter. With no surplus of labor wages have been persistently advanced in an effort to secure an adequate supply. The result has been a restricted immigration there will be no surplus of labor and no material reduction in the cost of production. Politicians have been dodging this issue and have been crediting the decline in grain largely to grain exchange operations, rather than to laws which make for an extremely high cost of production of manufactured commodities.

Grains, World Prospects. Unless grain prices advance more in line with manufactured commodities it is simply a question of time before the demand for the latter will slow up considerably. This might increase the supply of labor, as there is no way to increase the demand for it in general business between a boom period and hard times. Grains are a world proposition and reflect world's conditions. Labor has become largely a domestic proposition. Manufacturing costs cannot be reduced until there is a general lowering of wages. Limited speculation and the inelasticity of the grain market have been regarded as largely responsible for the persistent refusal of the wheat market to respond to ordinary bullish influences such as the black rust scare in the American northwest. The fear of a general depression, which was responsible for the break in the stock market, plus the effect of the Copper-Tincher bill, it is claimed, prevents what from advancing materially.

Refer to the Canadian. The average country speculator prefers the corn market to wheat. This accounts for the government's query as to why the corn market seems to be more liquid than the wheat market. In the wheat market, it is estimated an interest in corn of over 100,000,000, making it a rather slow moving market but one that usually responds only to domestic influences. The scarcity of the cash grain in this country.

Watch the Canadian crop. A tip given by northwestern grain men. Conditions there are so perfect that any change in the way of deterioration. The Canadian grain trade has its own troubles the same as that in the United States. Canada is doing the bulk of the American export business and should nothing happen to its crop it might offset any damage that comes to the Dakota.

Reserve Banks Can Help. With the Federal Reserve banks ordered to assist the farmers the local country banks are likely to be more liquid and grain may be backed. There is a little export business under way, but the milling demand is slow and low prices are being made for flour. Consumption of wheat is being increased by enlarged feeding on the farms and by bakers lowering the price of bread so that restaurants, hotels, and others would put bread on the list of luxuries in their menus. The wheat market is expected to show a recovery at $1.04 to $1.05 per bushel, September 1923, and $1.05 to $1.06 per bushel, October 1923.

July, September, December. The market is showing more strength in the face of a fair increase in stocks and larger arrivals the last two weeks. There is said to be a good demand for wheat, which makes it uncomfortable for the shorts.

There is too great a difference between July and September and December and July, the December market is the cash corn, as it represents scarcity. The Corn Products company plant at Argo, Ill., which has been shut down for two weeks, is to resume about a five day schedule.

Higher temperatures the last few days have forced the crop along fast, but the stand is unusually irregular, and the government report is expected to show a continuation of the averages.

July corn closed Saturday at 90¢, up 1¢ for the week; September 77¢, up 1¢; October 75¢, up 1¢. Prices for the week follow:

'Alonso of Spain First European to Defeat Tilden—All Trace of Missing Airmen Is Lost

CONTENDERS FOR ILLINOIS STATE CHAMPIONSHIP WHO MET YESTERDAY. At the left is Manuel Alonso of Spain, who was the victor. To the right is William T. Tilden, America's best player, who met his first defeat by a European.

WINS WOMEN'S STATE CHAMPIONSHIP. Helen Wills, 17 year old California lass, who defeated Marion Leighton, Chicago, 6-0, 6-0, at Skokie yesterday.

TO POORHOUSE. Tom C. Harbaugh, noted dime novelist, worsted by poverty.

ROYAL SCION. Infant son of Viscount Lascelles and former Princess Mary.

CLARENDON BEACH, ONE OF THE MOST POPULAR OF THE NORTH SIDE BATHING PLACES, AS IT LOOKS ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON. This picture, one of a series taken by The Tribune from an airplane, illustrates the conditions at Clarendon beach at the foot of Sunnyside avenue. The beach is maintained by the city. It is directly south of Wilson beach, one of the first established in the city, which is conducted as a private enterprise.

SEARCH FOR BALLOONISTS PROVES VAIN. Lieut. L. J. Roth (left) and Lieut. T. B. Null ready to start on final flight in U. S. Navy A-6698, which was found in Lake Erie.

PRESIDENT HARDING RUNS TRAIN. The chief executive looking out of the cab of the Olympian of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road before leaving for Alaska.

LONDON, July 9.—(Tribune Staff.)—The Anglo-French entente is on the verge of a break. Only one thing can prevent a break before the end of the week, and there is no sign of that. It is a yielding by the French of the use of promises position they have adopted towards Germany.

The facts of the situation are as follows: France has sought Great Britain's demand for a clear, definite statement as to what her intentions towards Germany. Last week she rejected Comte de St. Aulaire, French ambassador to London, to come into the British desire in dealing with money.

Lord Curzon at first refused to Comte de St. Aulaire until a answer had been received, and Lord Curzon's insistence Comte de St. Aulaire allowed him to see the president of the Council of Ministers from Paris, on which his verbal answer to the British demands was based.

France's Position Not on Paper. Technically and actually, however, Poincaré has successfully managed putting himself on paper. The British have not one written word which they could hold the French in the event of a change of policy in such a case the present policy would be unacceptable to British.

Thus Tammara is now able to outline policies as defined at last week's conference. The French believe the Germans are definitely beaten and the Germans can continue resistance many months yet. In fact, the Germans are not only on the verge of a collapse, but they are on all the rest of Europe.

The French refuse even to face the Germans until the positive answer in the Ruhr is publicly demanded and the Germans make a submission. They refuse to live in the slightest degree what they say will be after that, whether they withdraw from the Ruhr or not. The Germans insist treatment exacting from them terms of submission, but the French refuse to yield an inch.

Baldwin Promises Statement. The French also insist on payment of the full sum demanded as reparation, ignoring the claim that Germany is unable to pay, saying it is their business how Germany gets money. The Tammara is able to insist that Great Britain is already in favor of an international commission to determine Germany's ability to pay.

The cabinet met two hours with the usual secrecy, and it became of common knowledge after Prime Minister Baldwin stated he hoped to make a statement on the situation Thursday.

In spite of the usual secrecy, however, it is able to announce the British plan have not yet been worked out. Great Britain will take the initiative in sending delegates to Germany which will weigh up Germany's situation. France will be invited to come in, and if she refuses the same will be held just the same. It is hoped, however, that rather than complete isolation she will come.

Will Urge United States Chamber. The United States, according to present plans, will be invited to send a chairman, and if the present decision a jurist will be sent. Chief Justice Taft and Elyhu Root among those suggested.

It is expected that Italy, the neutrals, and the neutrals will immediately to this course. The plans are known to be in favor of the French control.

This bold policy has been practiced on the government by the French. It is a Prime Minister's own policy, but he has the support of the entire business community. There are another and wider possibilities on page 12, column 1.
